PLEASE REPORT

NEW WILMINGTON, PA., April 1, 1915.

DEAR FRIENDS:--

We present you herewith our Annual Catalogue and Book of College Photographic Views. We desire also to place a copy of each in the hands of young people who are ready for college. You can help us much. Please let us have their names and addresses. Use your influence to turn them toward Westminster. We will classify all names according to home address and a representative of the college will call upon them and present the advantages which Westminster offers. If prospects occur to your mind later, please report same and the college will follow up all information. Your knowledge of local conditions is necessarily superior to ours, and we believe that your interest will prompt you to co-operate with us in promoting the interests of the college and the young people who ought to avail themselves of its advantages.

The college will appreciate any service which you may render.

THE HILLSIDE

THE HILLSIDE is the home for the girls, under competent and sympathetic management. The building is beautifully located and is modern in every detail. The dining rooms and parlors are models of elegance. The Lodge for the girls on the same grounds furnishes similar accommodations for the Senior girls. A cultured, wholesome, home life prevails and only such restrictive regulations are maintained as are found necessary for the highest good of all, and meet the hearty approval of wise parents. All members of the Hillside family enjoy the same privileges and advantages. The cost varies according to location of room. Those who have a decided preference for special location should make reservations early. A small deposit is required when room is reserved.

THE ALUMNI

WESTMINSTER COLLEGE has had a long and worthy ministry; organized in 1852, she has since graduated more than seventeen hundred young people, who have rendered efficient service to the world, and have thus brought success to themselves and honor to their Alma Mater. They have adorned the learned professions and achieved a large measure of success in the industrial pursuits. Many have done notable service. The College feels a just pride in their achievements and relies confidently upon their loyalty. An active Alumni and enthusiastic student body are the chief assets of any college. Progress and growth are conditioned upon Alumni support and student effort. The College deserves both. The Alumni Association is as follows:

President, W. T. PIERCE, '95, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Vice-President, CHAS. B. ROBERTSON, '93, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Corresponding Sec'y, DR. ELIZABETH McLAUGHRY, '87, New Castle, Pa.

Recording Secretary, MRS. CHAS. E. CRONENWETT, '95, Butler, Pa.

Treasurer, HOWELL T. GETTY, '03, New Wilmington, Pa.

May books and nature be their early joy! And knowledge, rightly honored with that name— Knowledge not purchased by the loss of power! Wordsworth, Prelude.

RELIGIOUS ORGANIZATIONS

WESTMISTER COLLEGE stands for Christian Culture; it serves the church and state best by emphasizing religion in life. Instruction in the English Bible constitutes an integral part of all courses leading to degrees. Voluntary Bible study groups and Christian organizations are maintained by the students. Symmetrical culture for social efficiency is the aim. The College understands the homes from which its students come, and undertakes to maintain similar ideals in its life and teaching. Men's and Ladies' Bible Classes, Christian Associations, Volunteer Bands, Mission Study Groups and Prayer Leagues are maintained in a flourishing condition, and constitute a potent influence in the life of the institution. There are several strong church organizations in New Wilmington with which students and faculty maintain congenial and helpful relations. The Sabbath evening service is conducted by the President in the Chapel.

MATERIAL EQUIPMENT

THREE buildings are devoted exclusively to recitation and laboratory work: Old Main, the Science Hall and the College of Music. They are all admirably adapted to their purpose; commodious, well-furnished and complete in equipment. Recent improvements in the Science Building and furnishings make it a model science workshop. Other buildings belonging to the college group are: The Hillside, Senior Lodge, President's House, The Annex and Gymnasium. All college property is kept in excellent condition. Recitation rooms are well furnished, many of them with desks, cases and chairs in Craftsman or Mission style, and polished oak floors. The College Farm of two hundred acres adjoining affords an opportunity for the extension of college service by the organization of courses in Scientific Agriculture.

DEPARTMENTS OF PUBLIC SPEAKING AND ART

S*SPECIALISTS in these departments are meeting admirably the growing demands for training in Public Speaking and in Art. The College fosters the broadest culture and makes generous provision for instruction in the accomplishments represented by these branches of art. Public exhibits of pupils' work in art, and public programs in Oratory, Dramatic Expression, and inter-collegiate and inter-class debate, prove the efficiency of this work. The debating teams have been almost uniformly successful, and the College leads by a wide margin in victories in the Inter-collegiate Oratorical Association.*

These departments are doing much toward the training of teachers for public school and special positions.

COLLEGE RANK

WESTMINSTER COLLEGE maintains high standards, meeting the requirements formulated by the Carnegie Foundation. For admission to any course, fifteen units; for graduation, one hundred twenty semester hours. Students may transfer their credits to the large universities and enter similar grade without conditions; also, secure graduate standing upon certificate of graduation. The personnel and training of the teaching force, the science and library equipment, and the records of her graduate students have secured and maintain this worthy rank for Westminster. Several Westminster men have won Rhodes Scholarships, and her graduates have ranked high in the large professional schools and in the Graduate Departments of the great universities.

THE FACULTY

THE teaching force of the institution largely determines its efficiency. Scholarship, ability to impart and to inspire, character and personal influence toward formation of high ideals—these are the qualifications required in the successful college professor. In the faculty of Westminster College are represented the training of the best colleges and universities and the efficiency in scholarship and life resulting from long experience in teaching and a thorough understanding of student ideals and economic demands. The faculty is large enough to do the work of teaching without a sense of heavy burden. They, too, are expected to grow. Classes are divided to get the best results. The student's interests are paramount. He goes through college but once. He ought to get the best.

THE APPLICATION

THE importance of college training for those who are about to undertake to do the world's work is conceded—it cannot be over-estimated. Modern life and industry offer but small rewards to the unprepared—they will inevitably be crowded out in the contest for place and power. Their opportunity to achieve will be limited.

The call of the twentieth century is for trained men and women for its mighty tasks. The self-made man of the nineteenth century (all honor to him) will not do for this century. The tasks are so gigantic, the problems so intricate, the burdens so heavy that willing hands and strong arms alone can perform the world's work. The keenest intellect, the shrewdest judgment, the widest vision, the sanest courage are absolutely necessary. It is little short of criminal negligence for a young man to dare to live in this new century without long and diligent preparation.—From an article by Pres. H. A. King.

Westminster College takes account of the life purposes of its students and offers instruction in a wide range of studies, and liberal electives in all courses.

THE tragedy of the time is not poverty, not crime—those are world-old tragedies; it is the tragedy of the unprepared.

“Youth alone offers the time; the college offers the place; the twentieth century the opportunity.”
